Streitz. with perfect freedom from catarrh, happens on one occasion to fall asleep when he is out, and the next day has cold. The explanation of the phenomenon is to be found in the fact that during sleep nervous energy is lowered and the system therefore less able to withstand the injurious effects of cold. If we assume that the individual was also in a state of intoxication at the time, the damage done by the cold would be more serious, and the depression by alchohol is superadded to that of sleep. It is therefore not surprising circumstances. We instinctively acknowledge the nervous depression during sleep by taking the precaution to throw a rug over the knees before our forty winks on the dining room sofa.—Chambers Journal.
